the atmosphere. We cannot too heartily commend the practice of growing cover crops in orchards and plowing it under along in September or early October.

CONCERNING YOU AND BULLETINS.

In Logan, Utah, in the County of Cache and situated on a beautiful hill that overlooks the entire valley, is the Experiment Station of the Agricultural College of Utah. We give you this information with the idea in view of having you visit the place if you ever stop in Logan. You ought to do this if you are ever up in the northern county, because you sort of have a few shares in the institution.

The plant is not owned by Logan nor by Cache County, but is owned largely by the State of Utah and operated primarily for the people of Utah. There is a corps of scientists and assistants up there working out agricultural problems that are vital to our State. To get a little closer to what we want to say, they are working for you; you are paying their salaries. There is an idea prevalent among one class of farmers in the State that all the men up there are working for, is their salaries, but the idea is a wrong one and the men who hold it are reaching the stage where they are not taken seriously at all by the man on the other side of the fence. Sometimes they are politely referred to as "mossbacks," sometimes more vigorous but less elegant, if possible, English is used. Of course, they draw their salaries as a matter of course, finding them useful in purchasing things to eat and wear. Between salary times, however, they do work and it is a kind of work that has, up to the present, netted the State of Utah thousands of dollars. They do work along the line of dry farming and the work they have done has advanced desert land in Utah from $2.50 to $10.00 per acre. Utah has enough desert land to make the number of acres multiplied by $7.50 amount to a rather large sum of money.

They are working along other lines, working for you. How many of you know just what they are doing? The way to find out is broad and easy and costs one cent. Send your name to

Dr. E. D. Ball, Logan, and tell him you want the bulletins from his station.

This may seem like unnecessary advice to a great many of the readers of this article, but we do not agree with them. The writer has interviewed scores of Utah County farmers the past few weeks and about one in ten gets the bulletins and about one in every three is not aware that the station is a public institution and that the bulletins can be had for the asking.

The men up there are working out problems that effect you vitally. They are studying your profession. Write to Dr. Ball, read the bulletins and get a bowing acquaintance with your everyday business.

THE COLORADO INTERSTATE FAIR.

The territory lying West of the Missouri River has long been recognized by breeders as a profitable field for pure bred stock. They have been anxious to exhibit at some point in this great section where their stock could be seen and inspected by thousands, but until this year when the first annual Colorado Interstate Fair and Exposition will be held in Denver the second week in September there has been no such exhibition place. That the breeders appreciate the magnitude and the importance of this exhibition is shown by the number of requests for premium lists, and entries, being received by every mail by Mr. G. C. Fuller, of Denver, acting secretary of the fair.

The show offers a most liberal list of prizes, the amount aggregating upwards of $25,000, half of which is distributed in the live stock departments. They are up to date in every way, even to issuing a catalogue of the exhibits in the horse and cattle departments, in which entries close August 15, and in all other departments Sept. 5. The poultry department, by the way, will be remarkably large with cash premiums of $2,420 offered.

Mr. Harry Petrie, general superintendent, writes that the new buildings are rapidly nearing completion, and that all exhibits will be cared for systematically, with every care exercised for the comfort and safety of stock.
